

2010 Network for Peace Youth Dialogue Conference: Youth Talking About Peace and Change

Saturday, May 15th, 2010

9:30 AM - 4 PM

Marymount Manhattan College: 22 East 71st St., New York, NY

The Network for Peace through Dialogue is proud to present our 2010 Youth Dialogue Conference: Youth Talking About Peace and Change on Saturday, May 15th at Marymount Manhattan College.

The conference will bring together up to 100 young leaders ages 14 to 21 to explore how they can use dialogue in their work for peace and justice in their communities. They'll come away with new skills they can use to address the issues impacting NYC youth, and new connections in their work for change.

Young people from organizations and schools throughout NYC will be presenting workshops at the conference. Workshops will include:

- Human Rights Activist Project, Global Kids
"Moving Beyond Profiling: Youth Using Dialogue to Address Police Misconduct"
- Effective Alternative in Reconciliation Services (EARS)
"EARS Listens!: How Young People Can Understand, and Be Understood"
- The Osborne Association's Youth Advisory Board
"Achieving the Promise: Children of Incarcerated Parents"
- Mott Hall High School
"Diversity IN the School"
- Advocates for College Education (ACE)
"College Access and Leadership"
- Network for Peace through Dialogue Leadership Institute
"Teachers and Teens: Understand What They Mean"
- Network for Peace through Dialogue
"Talking with Teens: Dialogue in Youth Programs"

Click on the link for more information about the conference and how your youth can get involved. Space is limited, so please register today to bring your group to the conference. It'll be a fun and exciting day of building dialogue skills, building connections, and building peace!

We look forward to seeing you on May 15th!
